

European Venture Infrastructure Platform SeedBlink Partners with Allied For Startups to Strengthen Europe's Innovation Ecosystem

[Brussels, 18 June 2026] Allied For Startups is pleased to announce a new partnership with SeedBlink, a European integrated venture deal execution platform.

Founded in 2020, SeedBlink has evolved into an all-in-one solution for European founders and investors, encompassing investment syndicates, equity management, startup funding, and secondaries. With deep regional roots, the platform provides entrepreneurs and investors with a single source of truth to effectively manage equity ownership and navigate the complexities of private markets.

Over the past six years, SeedBlink has worked with thousands of founders and investors, facilitated more than 200 deals across multiple European jurisdictions and now oversees over €80 million in capital invested through its platform. The company brings operational fluency in the parts of the venture stack where fragmentation hurts the most: fundraising, syndication, equity management, secondaries, and venture legal services.

In addition, SeedBlink has recently strengthened its infrastructure offer with the launch of SeedBlink Legal, a legal boutique dedicated to the venture ecosystem, further enhancing support for investors and companies across fundraising, governance, and cross-border transactions.

Asked about the partnership, Andrei Dudoiu, CEO of SeedBlink, said: "SeedBlink was built in a Europe that made us and, on some days, nearly broke us. More than six years and hundreds of deals later, we have run out of illusions about the friction Europe still puts on its own founders and investors. That is why we have committed to joining Allied for Startups as partners. Private market players rarely step into public policy work and we think that has to change. Initiatives like EU-INC are too important for fintech and venture infrastructure to watch from the sidelines. AFS built the kind of coalition our ecosystem has needed for years, and we are proud to join as one of the first of our kind, ready to bring our investment and fundraising expertise to their members and the wider ecosystem.”

Serena Borbotti-Frison, Director-General of Allied For Startups, added: “SeedBlink’s journey is rooted in Central and Eastern Europe, a region known for founders and investors with strong ambition and adaptability. That experience brings an important perspective on how entrepreneurs and investors build and collaborate across different markets while navigating existing challenges. We’re excited to work with SeedBlink and help bring that on-the-ground perspective directly into Europe’s innovation policy discussions.”

Through this partnership, Allied For Startups and SeedBlink will collaborate to support startup-friendly policies such as the recently proposed EU-Inc. regulation, strengthen Europe’s investment ecosystem, and contribute to initiatives that help founders and investors better navigate cross-border growth opportunities.
